

MEDICAL SERVICES IN ST. PETERSBURG, RUSSIA

The U.S. Consulate General in St. Petersburg assumes no responsibility for the professional ability or reputation of the persons or medical facilities whose names appear on the following list. This information sheet was revised in April 2012, and is subject to change without notice. If you notice any inaccuracies, please inform the American Citizen Services Unit so that we can update this information.

Western medical care in St. Petersburg can be expensive and difficult to obtain, and may not be comprehensive. Some facilities offer quality services, but many restrict services to normal business hours and/or to members or persons willing to pay for services in advance. Acceptance of insurance in lieu of prepayment is rare. Most patients pay in cash and apply for reimbursement from their insurance companies upon their return to the United States. The Russian national medical system provides emergency care that, while officially free of charge, may be of a quality that ranges from uncomfortable to unacceptable. Moreover, Russian doctors often demand payment for disposable needles, medications, and some services. Medical evacuation to another country is an expensive option and may cost between $4,000 and $30,000; the Consulate strongly urges travelers to Russia to purchase overseas medical insurance that includes coverage for hospitalization and medical evacuation.

In the event of an emergency, the U.S. Consulate General will try to assist in arranging medical care for U.S. citizens. For assistance, please call 331-2600.
